About the Artists

Carlos Miguel Prieto, Music Director

The Maxine and Benjamin Swalin Chair

Mexican conductor and Grammy-winner Carlos Miguel Prieto started his tenure as Music Director of the North Carolina Symphony at the beginning of the 2023/24 season. From 2007 to 2022, he was Music Director of the Orquesta Sinfónica Nacional de México. In 2023, he received the Fine Arts Medal—Mexico’s highest honor for a musician. He served as Music Director of the Louisiana Philharmonic Orchestra from 2006 to 2023, helping lead the cultural renewal of New Orleans following Hurricane Katrina and earning a Grammy in 2024. Since 2008, he has also led the Orquesta Sinfónica de Minería (OSM), guiding the ensemble to a Latin Grammy award and residencies at Bravo! Vail in 2024 and 2025. This past summer, he continued an ambitious recording project of the complete works of Revueltas and Ortiz, as well as recording Beethoven Piano Concertos with Anne-Marie McDermott.

Prieto is in demand as a guest conductor for major orchestras, including the Chicago Symphony Orchestra; the symphony orchestras of Atlanta, Dallas, and Toronto; The Cleveland Orchestra and Minnesota Orchestra; and the San Francisco, Houston, and New World symphonies. In 2025, he led concerts with the Philharmonia Orchestra in London and Switzerland and conducted the Los Angeles Philharmonic at the Hollywood Bowl. He also served as Semifinal and Final Round Conductor for the 2025 Van Cliburn International Piano Competition.

Since 2002, Prieto has conducted the Orchestra of the Americas, serving as Principal Conductor until 2011, when he was appointed Music Director. He has also worked extensively with young musicians at The Juilliard School, the Colburn School, the Curtis Institute, and elsewhere. In 2025 he led the Sinfónica Azteca (Mexico’s acclaimed youth orchestra) tour of Mexico. He continues to mentor emerging talent through the Carlos Miguel Prieto Conducting Fellowship at OAcademy, an online conservatory bringing together teachers and students from around the world. He has also worked with the National Youth Orchestra of Great Britain and conducted both the National Youth Orchestra-USA and NYO2 at Carnegie Hall.

Prieto has conducted over 100 world premieres of works by Mexican and American composers, many commissioned by him. He has an extensive discography and was recognized by Musical America as Conductor of the Year in 2019. He is a graduate of Princeton and Harvard universities.

Paul Huang, violin

Paul Huang made his debut with the North Carolina Symphony in 2017 at UNC Health Summerfest in Cary, where he performed Barber's Violin Concerto.

Known for his “unfailing attractive, golden, and resonant tone” (The Strad), violinist Paul Huang received an Avery Fisher Career Grant in 2015 and a Lincoln Center Award for Emerging Artists in 2017. The Washington Post proclaimed him “an artist with the goods for a significant career” following his recital debut at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

During the 2025/26 season, Huang’s debuts will include the London Philharmonic Orchestra, Philon Orchestra, Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, and Naples Philharmonic; he returns to Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra and Vancouver Symphony Orchestra as well as the Pacific, Colorado, and Omaha symphonies. He will launch the fourth “Paul Huang & Friends” International Chamber Music Festival with the National Symphony Orchestra of Taiwan.

In 2021, Huang became the first classical violinist to perform his own arrangement of the National Anthem for the opening game of the NFL at the Bank of America Stadium in Charlotte to an audience of 75,000. His second album Mirrors was released worldwide in January of 2025.

Winner of the 2011 Young Concert Artists International Auditions, Huang’s other honors include First Prize at the 2009 Tibor Varga International Violin Competition, the 2009 Chi-Mei Cultural Foundation Arts Award for Taiwan’s Most Promising Young Artists, the 2013 Salon de Virtuosi Career Grant, and the 2014 Classical Recording Foundation Young Artist Award.

Born in Taiwan, Huang began violin lessons at the age of seven. He is a recipient of the inaugural Kovner Fellowship at The Juilliard School, where he earned his bachelor’s and master’s degrees. He plays on the 1742 “ex-Wieniawski” Guarneri del Gesù, on extended loan through the Stradivari Society of Chicago, and is on the faculty of Taipei National University of the Arts. He resides in New York.

About the Music

Overture to Fidelio, Op. 72c

[1814]

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN (1770-1827)

Beethoven, a man of big ideas and unbridled ambition, was naturally drawn to the grandest platform available to composers of his era: the operatic stage. Despite his best efforts, he never gained traction as an opera composer, with his one major effort, Leonore, landing as a flop that closed after three performances in 1805. Beethoven revised and shortened the opera for a revival the next year, at which point he swapped in a new overture. Further revisions in 1814 brought yet another new overture and the new title of Fidelio, the name Leonore assumes when she dresses as a man to free her husband from jail.

Like the rest of the revised opera—and so much else from Beethoven’s “middle period”—the final overture to Fidelio is compressed and distilled down to its essential gestures. No themes from the opera populate its scant six minutes, but its heroic posture sets up the drama’s emotional thrust, conveying ideals of personal honor and freedom from tyranny.

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN

When the 21-year-old Beethoven arrived in Vienna in 1792, he was following in the footsteps of his hero Mozart, whose death a year earlier left an opening for a hotshot keyboard player. Beethoven hustled for all sorts of paying gigs around town—teaching lessons, performing public and private concerts, and writing accessible music that could be published and sold to amateurs.

One of the most effective ways for popular musicians in Vienna to rake in a good chunk of income on a single night was to self-produce a concert for their own benefit. When Beethoven’s friend Franz Clement asked for a concerto to play on his own benefit concert, the composer felt obliged to come through for the violinist—who had introduced Beethoven’s Third Symphony on an earlier benefit concert, and who had been instrumental in getting the opera Fidelio produced.

Beethoven threw together an entire Violin Concerto with uncharacteristic speed, cutting it so close that the soloist supposedly had to sight-read his part at the performance. The Violin Concerto starts with a quintessential Beethoven theme: a single note, D, struck five consecutive times by the timpanist. This modest tapping motive proves to be the backbone of the substantial first movement. One exceptionally refined moment comes just after the first movement cadenza, when the violin offers a guileless melody over a naked accompaniment of plucked strings.

The slow movement continues the rarified mood with a stately theme and variations accompanied only by the lower winds and muted strings. The Rondo finale, reached without pause through a solo cadenza, supplies the concerto with a more extroverted conclusion. Taking a page from Haydn, who loved to introduce a theme softly and then hammer it hard the second time, Beethoven goes a step farther by delaying the impact until two melodic cycles have passed by, the second voiced even more delicately than the first.

Symphony No. 4 in B-flat, Op. 60

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN

Beethoven's first two symphonies took their cues from Haydn, the formidable "father of the symphony" and Beethoven's teacher for a short while after he moved to Vienna. Soon enough, Beethoven honed a symphonic voice that eclipsed even Haydn's in its scale and grandeur, beginning with the massive Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") from 1803—which the North Carolina Symphony will perform in November—and continuing in the fateful Symphony No. 5 from 1808. Sandwiched between those landmark symphonies was a smaller specimen, the Symphony No. 4 in B-flat Major, underscoring Beethoven's lasting debt to Haydn.

Beethoven composed the Fourth Symphony in mid-1806, and he first unveiled it at a private concert in March 1807. Close followers of Haydn's "London" symphonies might have noted Beethoven's nod to the Symphony No. 102, which likewise begins with a held B-flat in octaves. Whereas Haydn made a subtle detour to B-flat minor in his introduction, Beethoven fully embraced the move to the minor scale, until the harmonies sneak back to the major key via one of the score's many slippery and surprising transitions, launching the Allegro vivace body of the movement.

The Adagio begins with an introductory figure that seems to have lingered from the end of the first movement, preparing the way for a sweet, singing melody. The third movement was labeled a Minuet, but the quick and boisterous music is really a scherzo in all but name, representing Beethoven's faster and wilder take on Haydn's dancing diversions.

Beethoven's finale is full of Haydn's impish wit, and it saves the best punch line for the end, when the violins, as if thoroughly exhausted, slowly trudge through the main theme one last time. After a similarly lethargic response from the bassoons and then the cellos and basses, the group rallies to end the symphony with an energetic flourish.

Named musician chairs are made possible through very meaningful gifts to the Symphony's endowment. As such, these donor families are also members of the Lamar Stringfield Society.

All string players rotate stands on a periodic basis in each section with the exception of titled players: Principals, Associate Principals, and Assistant Principals.

The North Carolina Symphony is a member of the League of American Orchestras and the International Conference of Symphony and Opera Musicians.

The North Carolina Master Chorale is the Resident Chorus of the North Carolina Symphony.

The North Carolina Symphony Foundation gratefully acknowledges the generous gift of the Lupot violin from Arnold and Zena† Lerman.
