The Master Chorale includes a 175-voice Symphonic Choir, a professional Chamber Choir of 16-60 voices, and the North Carolina Master Chorale Youth Choir, which is a professionally directed honors choir for high school students. Singers in all of these choirs are selected through auditions.

Named in 2014 as the resident choir of the North Carolina Symphony, the North Carolina Master Chorale provides choral support for the Symphony for major choral works in addition to their own performances. The Master Chorale's season consists of five to six concerts for the adult choirs, and one Youth Choir performance. The Chorale also provides the choir for Carolina Ballet performances, regularly collaborates with other arts organizations, and provides choral music to North Carolina choirs through a Music Lending Library. The organization has been awarded a Raleigh Medal of Arts, and has twice filmed their holiday concert for broadcast on PBS North Carolina.

About the Music

Symphony No. 7, Angel of Light

[1994]

EINOJUHANİ RAUTAVAARA (1928-2016)

When Einojuhani Rautavaara was an emerging composer in Finland, he received the ultimate seal of approval when living legend Jean Sibelius chose him for a scholarship to study at The Juilliard School in New York. After an early phase of experimentation with the rigorous serial techniques that dominated musical thought in the 1960s, Rautavaara relaxed into a more melodic, mystical style that made him the true heir to Sibelius as a composer of distinctly Finnish and highly personal symphonies.

The Seventh Symphony that Rautavaara composed in 1994 for the Bloomington Symphony Orchestra in Indiana belonged to a series of "Angel" works that dated back to the late 1970s.

"The first impulse for these pieces came from their titles," Rautavaara wrote, "which, by persisting forcefully in my mind, finally set off a force field of energy—in other words, music. No story or 'program' is associated with these works. Behind them, however, is the certainty that there exist different levels of knowledge, different truths, those that can be explained rationally and those which cannot be defined in words. Music is a language in which one can tell such truths ecstatically but without recourse to words. If one wishes to find words for them, one might for example speak of 'angels.'"

"Great" Mass in C Minor

WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART (1756-1791)

Mozart grew up in Salzburg surrounded by church music in that epicenter of Catholic life in Austria. After the excitement of touring as a child prodigy, he found it unbearable to be back home working alongside his overbearing father for the church, at a time when it was controlled by a particularly nasty archbishop. Despite his best efforts to find a job elsewhere, Mozart was still stuck there at the age of 25, until he finally took the risk to break ties with Salzburg and try freelancing in Vienna.

Life in Vienna proved transformative for Mozart. Guided by an older patron, he did a deep dive into the music of Bach and Handel, at a time when their contrapuntal style was considered hopelessly old-fashioned. Mozart also had space to pursue his greatest passion, opera—which brought him back into the orbit of a powerhouse theater family, the Webers. Some years earlier, he had pursued a romance with soprano Aloysia Weber; that relationship had fizzled, but now it was her younger sister Constanze who caught Mozart's eye. They ended up marrying in 1782, over the objections of Mozart's father.

In what turned out to be his only return visit, Mozart brought his new bride to Salzburg in 1783 to introduce her to his family and smooth over any hard feelings. It was in connection with that trip that he composed his "Great" Mass in C minor, for reasons that are not entirely clear. Maybe it was a peace offering to the father and the church he abandoned; or it might have been designed to show off his wife (who sang the soprano solos) and prove her merit; or perhaps it was an act of faith, coming after a point when Constanze seemed to be at death's door.

Mozart began composing the mass in 1782, and at the beginning of 1783 he wrote to his father that he had "half a mass which is still lying here waiting to be finished." And despite his ability to write with astonishing speed, it still wasn't complete when he presented it during a Sunday service in Salzburg that October. He reworked some of the material into a later cantata, but otherwise he never returned to this ambitious, unpaid project.

All of the musical cross-currents that make Mozart's "Great" Mass so fascinating are present in the opening Kyrie. In the choral setting of the words "Kyrie eleison," the pulsing harmonies in the orchestra and contrapuntal layering of the voices channel the heft and grandeur of Bach. Then, with a seamless key change and a drastic thinning out of the textures, we find ourselves in one of those sweet, ambling andantes that Mozart loved so much as a vehicle for impossibly long and weightless phrases, as the solo soprano sings "Christe eleison" in a manner lifted straight out of Italian opera.

Another aspect that stands out is the sheer sonic power of Mozart's setting, featuring an orchestra stuffed with brass and timpani that makes sections such as the Gloria and Sanctus resonate with extraordinary brilliance. Bridging his upbringing in the church and the showmanship of his prime years in Vienna, this "Great" Mass stands out as a singular treasure in Mozart's vast output.
